													Given that 2013 was a transition year (in which the board had to revise its new share plan after receiving negative feedback from investors), senior management's remuneration for 2013 has not been subject to the more stringent performance criteria (and is not as transparent) as the new scheme. The company spent a year or so devising a new share plan that is more agreeable to shareholders, so it's perhaps harsh to vote against. Equally, the rationale for payments in 2013 is not as clear as it could be so doesn't warrant support either.

Company has once again bundled the election. We discussed this issue with the company in 2013 and they said they would look into changing it, but apparently they didn't. ISS is recommending to vote against on a relatively low level of independence in the board which does not represent their 45 percent free-float and is not in line with ISS recommended independence level of 35 percent, which I think is a bit harsh given that the company's current level of independence (22 percent) is in line with Novo Mercado requirements. Company has also bundled the elections for the fiscal council.

There is insufficient information disclosed regarding variable performance grants, and the performance related incentive to non-executives which goes against best practice.

While Mr. Dochia technically qualifies for independence by ISS reckoning the grounds that he ceases to be an executive in 2007, notwithstanding he was head of the Corporate Finance division for several years and spent the interim period in part as director of affiliated companies.
