A copy of the opinion letter will be attached to the Statement of the Reasons for Setting the Ratio for Exchange of Shares to be furnished at the head office of Sony pursuant to Clauses 1 and 9 of Article 358 of the Commercial Code. The assumptions and conditions made or used by Morgan Stanley in the preparation of the opinion are set forth in such opinion letter. In the preparation of its opinion, Morgan Stanley has performed a DCF (Discounted Cash Flow) analysis, a comparable companies analysis and other analyses it deemed appropriate to estimate the equity values of Sony and SCE on a consolidated basis, estimated the incremental value of synergies expected as the result of the transaction, and analyzed the trading performance of Sony's common stock. Morgan Stanley holds the view that focusing exclusively on any particular valuation method or giving specific weights to different methods to make a mechanical calculation is inappropriate and, accordingly, considered all of its analyses as a whole in arriving its opinion.
2. Merrill Lynch has performed the exchange ratio analysis for this transaction based on the estimated equity values of SCE and Sony on a consolidated basis through the following valuation methodologies: DCF analysis incorporating value to be created in the converging business domain of SCE and Sony, which is realized in Sony through the contribution of SCE; publicly traded comparable companies analysis; acquisition comparables analysis; and backward- and forward-looking contribution analysis.

Sony to Separate a Part of Its Business to Establish a Joint Venture Company

With NTT DoCoMo for FeliCa Business

Sony Corporation (Sony) resolved at a meeting of the Executive Board held today to separate and transfer the operation of Network Application & Contents Service Sector F Project to a newly established company, FeliCa Networks, Inc. (FeliCa Networks) on January 7, 2004.

FeliCa Networks will become a joint venture company of Sony and NTT DoCoMo, Inc. in late January 2004 through the issuance of new shares.

1. Purpose of the separation

Sony began developing FeliCa in 1988, and business use of the technology became widespread following the deployment of the technology in Hong Kong transport systems in 1997. FeliCa is now used in JR East's Suica[®] system, as well as in a number of transport systems around the world. Other applications include the Edy electronic money service, the eLIO online credit service and various company/organizational ID security systems. At present, 38 million cards using FeliCa chips have been issued worldwide.

This new company will develop the technology for a new IC chip, tentatively named mobile FeliCa IC, that will integrate mobile phones with the FeliCa technology. This new company will then implement production and sales licensing agreements with chip manufacturers, and work to create a platform whereby content providers can offer mobile services that feature both flexibility and security. The mobile FeliCa IC and service platform will be developed in an open environment and provided to the widest possible range of mobile telecommunications operators and content providers.

Through the operations of this new company, Sony aims to strengthen the market and also create new technological opportunities within the mobile phone sector. At the same time, they will energetically promote the FeliCa technology service platform in order to become a pillar of the rapidly emerging world of contactless IC services.

November 28, 2003	Executive Board meeting to approve separation plan

* Pursuant to the provisions of Clause 1 of Article 374-6 of the Commercial Code, Sony shall perform the separation without approval of the separation agreement by its shareholders.

(2) Method of the separation

I. Method

Sony will separate a part of its business and the new company, FeliCa Networks will take over the separated part of the business.

II. Reason for adopting this method

This method was chosen because it was determined to be the most efficient means by which to transfer the relevant business.

(3) Allocation of shares

The new company will issue 85,000 shares of common stock, and will allocate all of them to Sony.

(4) Rights and obligations to be taken over by the new company

The following items (i) and (ii) are taken over by the new company.

- (i) Assets (excluding intellectual property rights) relating to the business to be separated and transferred, which are considered necessary for the new company to operate.
- (ii) Contracts and agreements which are considered necessary for the new company to operate, and any and all of the assets (excluding the assets specified in item (i), if any), liabilities, rights and responsibilities under such contracts and agreements.

Regarding intellectual property rights related to the business to be separated and transferred, which are owned and separately designated by Sony, Sony grants to the new company a license, subject to the terms and conditions separately agreed upon by Sony and the new company.

(5) Prospects of paying debt obligations

Edgar Filing: SONY CORP - Form 6-K

Based on the projected financial statement as of January 7, 2004, both Sony and the new company have significantly more assets than liabilities. Additionally, both companies are expected not to post any significant revenue declines or long term consecutive losses from their operations after the separation that are serious enough to affect their financial capability to pay their respective debt obligations. Therefore, Sony believes that both Sony and the new company can pay the debt obligations that will come due after the separation.
