Summary
Why We Are Here
Sharp Contrast in Value Creation Plans
Stewards of Shareholder Value

Nautilus
Board of Directors, after the Company's second quarter operating loss (its first quarterly operating loss
in Nautilus
history
as a public company),
fired
its former CEO
and launched
a
restructuring plan to maximize shareholder value.

The Company hired Bob Falcone, Nike's former CFO, as the new CEO to implement this turnaround.

At this critical juncture in Nautilus history, Sherborne Investors LP ( Sherborne ) is seeking to have its nominees control Nautilus Board and unwind Nautilus
strategy.

Management is vigorously pursuing a diversified strategy.

Strategy takes advantage of large retail and commercial markets.

Sherborne
would like to focus on the Direct
channel,
an approach
that has already proven
to be unsuccessful for Nautilus.

The Direct channel has been relatively flat with diminished profit profile over the last five years and is Nautilus smallest market.

Nautilus management and Board:

Experienced, proven fitness industry and operational leadership.

In process of aggressively implementing turnaround plan.

Best stewards for value creation.

Sherborne:

Turned down a Nautilus offer of proportional Board representation.

Trying to control Company's Board without ownership of a controlling economic interest.

Mixed track-record; limited relevant experience.

Who We Are

Nautilus is a leading provider of high performance fitness equipment.

The Company has five of the industry's top brands by quality and performance.

Nautilus
designs,
produces
and markets
products
for a wide range
of
end-users
to help people achieve a fit and healthy lifestyle.

Management Is Already Addressing Areas

Highlighted by Sherborne

Sherborne Identified Consideration

Action Completed / Currently Being Undertaken by Nautilus

Retail Channel

Setting minimum acceptable financial targets, including standard margin and minimum order requirements.

Focusing sales efforts on those customers and products that are best suited for channel:

Presence in 6,800 doors in North America.

Penetration of more than four SKUs per door.

Greater presence of cardio; fewer home gyms.

Making efficient use of fixed operating costs:

Reduced compensation expense by 12% through workforce reductions.

Direct to Consumer Channel

Focusing on quality leads with high probability of conversion instead of focusing on increasing the quantity of leads (ROI focus rather than growth focus).

Performing market research to ensure products brought to market in the Direct channel will be profitable.

Focusing on core print and television advertising with high conversion rates.

Reducing the number of products promoted in the Direct channel in order to focus advertising spend on key products.

Manufacturing

Land America acquisition:

Opens up opportunities for additional segments and other portions of the retail channel.

Allows for the consolidation of contract manufacturers from 12 to three to five.

Evaluating the complete manufacturing and distribution process to improve margins.

Management

Recently hired Timothy Joyce as Head of Global Sales.

Continuing to secure talent in key areas:

Marketing and creative development.

Product-focused general managers.

Research, design, and development.

Balance Sheet

Strengthening the balance sheet:

Secured the current line of credit and finalizing a new facility in order to address liquidity concerns.

Pursuing the sale of Pearl iZUMi.

Pursuing the sale of inefficient and unprofitable facilities and investments.

Liquidating aging and discontinued inventory and parts.

Other

Pursuing new volume through key accounts.

Seeking co-tenant for surplus space at headquarters.

Nautilus has diversified away from its dependence on the Direct channel because:

Only about 30% of customers are willing to consider shopping direct.

The Company's revenues declined from 2002 to 2003 due to an over-reliance on the Direct channel.

Bowflex was copied in late 2002 before its patent expiration in 2004, by a competitor who sold a product with a similar name and appearance in the retail market.

The Direct channel has become far more complex.

A significant number of competitors have entered the channel.

Nautilus tried to work constructively with Sherborne without subjecting all shareholders to a distracting, expensive proxy contest.

From August to September 2007, representatives of Nautilus and Sherborne had three face-to-face meetings and several other separate discussions.

Nautilus Has Attempted to Work Constructively
With Sherborne
Nautilus Offer

Offered Sherborne board representation proportional to its share ownership.

Offered Sherborne representation on all of its committees, including a new executive committee which would have increased oversight over operational matters in response to Sherborne's concerns.

Nautilus was also prepared to offer another large institutional shareholder board membership.

Sherborne Response

Sherborne indicated no interest in Nautilus proposals.

Soliciting proxies to replace a majority of the Board.

Seeking control of the Board without a corresponding controlling ownership interest.

Underscored by Bramson's stated desire to serve as Chairman.

If the Sherborne proposals are defeated, Nautilus intends to increase the size of the Board and offer Sherborne and Sun Capital Securities, LLC, Nautilus next largest shareholder, Board representation.

Ampex

A Cautionary Tale

Situation Overview

Ampex Stock Price Performance Under Bramson

Ampex Corporation engages in the development and licensing of visual information technology products.

A Bramson-led company purchased Ampex in 1987 for $479 million and took the company public in 1992.

Through numerous changes in strategy, work force reductions, and management team changes, Ampex struggled under Bramson's leadership.

Since the stock's IPO in 1992, Ampex shares have been delisted twice on two different public exchanges.

Ampex shares traded down significantly in early November 2007, after the company announced that it might be forced to file for bankruptcy.

Prior to this announcement, Bramson reduced his position in Ampex from 12.5% of shares outstanding in August 2006 to 4.99% of shares outstanding in October 2007.

$1.00 invested in Ampex's 1992 IPO was worth less than $0.02 on November 20, 2007.

Edward Bramson's only apparent operational role at a publicly-listed U.S. company reduced shareholder value significantly.

Sherborne turnaround strategies can present significant risk to a business.

Nautilus Board: Looking Out for the Best Interests of ALL
Shareholders

Focused on executing turnaround plan based on leveraging the Company's core competitive advantages and key market opportunities.

Targeting a large, growing market.

Increasing margins through vertical integration and other cost saving initiatives.

Nautilus

Board took decisive action in response to the Company's second quarter operating loss.

The
election
of Sherborne's
slate
of director-nominees
could jeopardize shareholders
opportunity
to maximize value of their shares.

To our knowledge, neither Sherborne nor its nominees have any meaningful experience in the fitness industry.

Nautilus
current Board has a great deal more retail experience.

Sherborne proposals would cause significant disruption to the business at a critical juncture in its history.

Sherborne's strategy for Nautilus is misguided as it relies on an antiquated business model and ignores many valuable customers.

Sherborne
is attempting to have its nominees
control
the Company
without ownership
a corresponding controlling ownership interest.
Robert
Falcone's
turnaround

plan presents
the right
strategy
at
the right
time
with
the
right
leadership.
