Frederic M. Poses
Chairman and Chief Executive Officer

March 1, 2008

Dear colleagues:

This is an interesting time for our company. We continue to build our business for both the short- and long-term. At the same time, we have activities under way to prepare for our acquisition by Ingersoll Rand. But no activity is more important than the work you do on your job every day. Your commitment to that work gave us strong results for 2007. You maintained the Trane tradition of staying focused on customers and reaching higher to build on past performance.

That's the kind of effort we will need to deliver on our 2008 plans, which call for sales growth in the 5-6 percent range and for earnings in the range of 10 to 15 percent. Those plans reflect our best knowledge of what the global and regional economic conditions will be for the year. And we built them with contingencies for the downside and with a set of opportunities and risks. While there may be more economic uncertainty today than in most years, the fundamentals of how we operate and adjust do not change. Each one of us has lots of opportunities and work to do to make Trane successful in 2008 and beyond.

There are many measures of Trane's success, but none is more important than our progress with safety. In an ideal world, our goal for the year would be no accidents at all. We're not there yet, but we have set a target to average only one lost-time accident per week. Thanks to our safety initiative and the vigilance of each one of you, we're slightly ahead of our goal so far this year. Safety is an area where there is no such thing as good enough, just a constant effort to be better. Thank you for your success so far and keep up the good work.

Acquisition update

We expect to complete the acquisition of Trane by Ingersoll Rand during the second quarter. The process of getting the necessary government approvals is moving ahead. Last month U.S. regulators approved the acquisition from an antitrust standpoint. We also expect to be granted the remaining antitrust clearances by mid-April.

In addition to antitrust approvals, we must obtain Trane shareholder approval. Obtaining Trane shareholder approval starts with filing the proxy statement/prospectus on Form S-4 with the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC). The prospectus part of the Form S-4 provides details regarding the Ingersoll Rand shares to be issued to Trane shareholders. The proxy statement part of the Form S-4 provides Trane shareholders more information, including the date of the Trane shareholders meeting to vote on the sale and background and reasons for the sale. In early March, Ingersoll Rand expects to file the Form S-4 proxy statement/prospectus including 2007 financials from both companies. After the S-4 is declared effective by the SEC, Trane's shareowners will vote on the sale.

Edgar Filing: TRANE INC. - Form 425

Once Ingersoll Rand makes the preliminary filing of the Form S-4, we will post it to Trane.com in the Investor Relations section under Financial Statements and SEC Filings. You also will be able to access it under the ticker symbol for Ingersoll Rand (NYSE: IR) at Yahoo Finance under SEC filing (on the left-hand navigation bar under Company). You will be able to access the final filing of the Form S-4 the same ways.

Finalizing the acquisition legally, of course, is just the beginning of building a great $17 billion diversified industrial company. Integration planning teams for 12 different functions including representatives from both companies were launched last month. We are legally required to operate as two separate companies until the acquisition is officially completed. But the better job of integration planning we do now, the better we will be able to start delivering the results we expect to achieve as part of a larger diversified industrial company with expanded capability in climate control markets.

As the integration plan moves forward you will be hearing more about the cost-saving synergies Ingersoll Rand and Trane intend to realize through the acquisition. While cost savings are important, it would be a big mistake to think of this acquisition as only a cost-cutting exercise. This plan will provide strategic advantages by bringing together two companies with different but complementary strengths in climate control.

Investors have expressed considerable support for the strategic logic of the sale of Trane to Ingersoll Rand and the potential value of a large, diversified industrial company with strength in climate control technologies. Of course, they want to see that value demonstrated. The value will come from demonstrating both normal growth and productivity as well as realizing the cost synergies Ingersoll Rand promised in the short term and additional growth in the long term. The integration teams are laying the foundation for these results, and that's why it's so important that we support this work.

There is a high level of commitment by both companies to launch a successful combined Trane and Ingersoll Rand. Whether you're working on your normal job, the integration process or both, I say thank you. Being successful in both the short- and long-term will say a lot about the success of the combined company. So, please continue to stay focused and make a difference.

Thanks,
