UPDATE 03

INTEGRATION RIGHT ON COURSE

BUILDING A STRONGER ORGANIZATION TOGETHER

Wednesday, May 13

To: Posted to merger website of both companies only

We are making good progress on the integration and have now completed the baselining phase, identifying and solidifying the processes and way of working at both companies. In order to accelerate into the design phase of the combined entity, we will soon appoint a series of decision makers within the new structure. In this phase of the integration, members of the management team (MT) for the combined entity are now selecting their direct reports under the proposed merger. The primary goal is to create the best team possible from the combined talent of Freescale and NXP through a consistent process and selection criteria, matching the needs of the business with talent and knowledge from both companies, that we expect to complete by 27 May. We will keep you updated on how this process will run for the rest of the organization as often as we can.

Under the leadership of the Integration Management Office (IMO), major work activities have been mapped, and the appropriate structure around the merger process determined. Integration workstreams and their respective leads have also been identified, as follows:

Please note: Most workstreams require a designated lead from both NXP and Freescale, though some do not. In these cases, a single lead will be responsible for the workstream covering both companies.

Integration Workshop

From May 6th to 7th, the IMO led the first Integration Workshop at Freescale HQ in Austin, Texas. The workshop, with workstream leads, was two focused days spent planning and establishing deliverables for the integrated company. Comprising more than 40 group working sessions between workstreams, a key aspect of the workshop was agreeing on a baseline harmonization of the many different functions and processes of both companies. This meant agreeing on scope, and clearly identifying owners for specific initiatives. A core focus of the two days was getting the right people from both companies talking to each other, and then building plans together for the integrated company. We also discussed Day 1 the first day as a combined company and plans for the preparation of this important milestone.

Overall, there was a lot of positive energy and great teamwork from all participants throughout the workshop. Discussions around the benefits of the merger were especially energizing. It was evident that everyone is passionate and dedicated to the success of the combined entity.

We will continue to update you as work continues on the proposed merger. Please refer to the merger webpage for the most up-to-date information (URL).
