Attention: All Hewlett-Packard Stockholders

HP A BRIGHTER FUTURE WITHOUT COMPAQ JUST ASK THE EXPERTS

HP STOCKHOLDERS COULD REALIZE $14 TO $17 MORE PER SHARE WITHOUT COMPAQ
UNDER A FOCUS AND EXECUTE STRATEGY

We believe stockholders could realize $14 to $17 more per share without Compaq by following the three guiding principles underlying our Focus and Execute strategy, which can be summarized as:

Re-allocate investment in Imaging & Printing and defend market leadership role

Build mid-range and high-end enterprise position by filling key gaps

Focus on profitability, not scale in PCs

Walter Hewlett is right, I believe, about the merger compounding H-P's problems because it increases its exposure to PCs at a time when the business has become depressingly commodity-based and nearly profitless.

*Jim Seymour, PC Magazine columnist, TheStreet.com, 2/25/02**

We went through an exhaustive process, and Walter Hewlett's alternative of a refocus on the enterprise business, with a serious look at spinning off the printer business is the best value alternative.

Vinit Bodas, Brandes Investment Partners LP, 2/26/02

UNATTRACTIVE BUSINESS MIX

The proposed Compaq transaction would trade HP stockholders' ownership in the crown jewel, Imaging & Printing, while more than doubling HP's exposure to Compaq's low-end commodity computing business.

Our concern is that too often in the past numerous technology companies have prized the number one market share position as the be-all, end-all measure of success, which has done little for investors.

Walter J. Winnitzki, First Albany Corp., First Call, 3/05/02

We remain opposed to the potential HWP/CPQ combination due to the dilution of HWP investors' exposure to the imaging business, increased exposure to the unattractive PC business, unlikely benefit from economies of scale in the combined PC operations, relatively unattractive nature of CPQ's services businesses, and risk of customer defections in Compaq's enterprise installed base.

Don Young, UBS Warburg, First Call, 1/31/02

UNACCEPTABLE AND SUBSTANTIAL INTEGRATION RISK

Technology mergers are extremely difficult to integrate due to the velocity, complexity and competitiveness in the technology markets. And this is a technology merger. HP's estimated 18-24 months integration is a lifetime in the technology industry.

Edgar Filing: HEWLETT PACKARD CO - Form DFAN14A

No large-scale high-tech merger has ever worked-ever...Melding two large and fiercely competitive organizations is a formidable challenge in any industry.

David Yoffie, Harvard Business School, 12/17/01

Putting two struggling businesses...together is like having two drowning people grab on to each other and pull each other down...there's never been one of these deals in the history of the technology industry that's ever worked.

Michael Holland, Holland & Company, CNBC 3/02/02

It's an asymmetric payoff to the negative side, we feel, and it just isn't worth taking on the huge integration risk for just a little bit of upside.

Bruce Garelick, Loomis Sayles & Co., Bloomberg TV, 2/27/02

FINANCIAL IMPACT OF HP/COMPAQ MERGER TO HP STOCKHOLDERS HAS BEEN AND WILL BE NEGATIVE

Since the announcement of the proposed Compaq merger, HP stockholders have lost almost $9 billion relative to an index of comparable companies.<sup>3</sup> We expect HP stockholders would lose approximately $4.70 per share as a result of the proposed merger with Compaq.<sup>4</sup> HP is paying a huge premium for Compaq—48.2 times CY 2002 earnings vs. 19 times forward earnings for comparable transactions—and more than twice HP's own multiple.

When it comes to substance, we favor the Hewlett argument.

Kimberly Alexy, Prudential Securities, Inc., First Call, 2/19/02

We believe that investors are taking on material risk for relatively modest upside to HWP's standalone FY 2003 earnings.

Toni Sacconaghi, Sanford Bernstein, First Call, 2/28/02
