Item 8.01. Other Events

Long term and strategic investors, including the Company's Chairman, President and three shareholders, each of which already beneficially owns more than five percent of the magicJack's outstanding ordinary shares, bought approximately one million shares from Dan Borislow, magicJack's CEO. The Board was advised, and supportive of a transaction that would enable Mr. Borislow to not have personal debt tied to his stock. Following this transaction, Mr. Borislow remains the Company's largest shareholder, beneficially owning more than 20 percent of the Company's ordinary shares. In addition, Mr. Borislow has committed not to margin or pledge his remaining shares in the future.

Mr. Borislow receives a base salary of $200,000 per year and is not entitled to any other equity-based or incentive compensation. Mr. Borislow said, "I regrettably had to sell shares in magicJack for liquidity. Investors and the Board thought it wise that I be positioned to stay out of debt tied to my magicJack stock, so that there could not even be the appearance of a conflict with the Company when considering dividends, acquisitions and other important matters .magicJack is the only stock that I own and to a large extent, defines who I am. Some recent highly publicized news events pertaining to Board member and executive margin accounts moved the decision along quicker. With some recent inventions being deployed, new products and services launching soon and the company on a solid earnings track I and the Company continue to be in a great position". Mr. Borislow continued, "In selling these shares, I purposely sought investors who share my commitment to this Company and its future. I was willing to sell shares at an attractive price compared to current market prices to find that kind of investor for our Company and new investors who can add to their new position. I was unwilling to sell shares in the open market. I accomplished these goals."

The shares were sold under an effective shelf registration statement.
