BT REAPS REWARD FOR TOUGH DECISIONS

Sir Christopher Bland, BT chairman, today outlined how the company has transformed itself over the past two years.

Addressing shareholders at its annual general meeting in London, Sir Christopher explained how, by taking tough decisions early on, the company has reaped the benefits and had another good year.

He said: "We were one of the first incumbent telcos in Europe to recognise the need for a strong balance sheet, and to take decisive action to reduce debt through a rights issue and asset sales. This was underpinned by strong and continuing cash generation. These strengths have enabled us to enhance our dividend payout and reward our shareholders."

Edgar Filing: BT GROUP PLC - Form 6-K

He pointed out that just two years ago the company's debt had reached GBP28 billion; it had forgotten how to generate free cash flow; its strategy was unclear; and the morale of customers, employees and shareholders was low.

He continued: "Since then a transformation has occurred. A new board and management team have built the foundations for a sustainable future. We have established, and started to execute, a new strategy. We have set stretching targets. We have reduced our debt substantially through improved operations and driving hard for cash.

"Last year, when I had the pleasure of welcoming you to BT Group's inaugural AGM, following the demerger of mm02, that transformation was just beginning. Today, at our second AGM, its effects are there for all to see.

"We have transformed uncertainty into clarity; low morale into enthusiasm; loss into profit; a suspended dividend into a significant one."

Sir Christopher added that last year earnings per share grew by 61 per cent and that BT generated operating free cash flow of GBP1.7 billion, surpassing its 2004/05 target. BT cut its net debt to GBP9.6 billion, two years ahead of schedule.

He warned that while these numbers demonstrate that decisive action delivers results there remains a lot to do.

Sir Christopher said: "Looking at the share price of your company since its demerger in November 2001, we have outperformed the UK and European telecoms sector in a declining market. Our share price has suffered with the fall in the FTSE 100 even though our performance, in earnings per share, has moved strongly upwards

"However, total shareholder return also includes the dividend - and here there has been positive news for shareholders.

"As we announced in May, we are proposing a final dividend of 4.25 pence for last year. This gives a full year dividend to our shareholders of 6.5 pence, more than 45 per cent of our earnings.

"Next year, and in subsequent years, we believe it will be possible to pay out a greater proportion of earnings, moving further towards the 50 per cent mark.

"This belief is based on the progress we have made to date; our confidence in our ability to generate cash; and our firm commitment to delivering a return to shareholders."

Sir Christopher emphasised that well-managed, motivated people are fundamental to the company's success. He highlighted the success of company's celebrations at Alton Towers three weeks ago where BT entertained around 19,000 BT employees with more than 30 years service.

In total, BT welcomed almost 47,000 people - employees, their families and friends

"I don't believe there is another UK private sector employer who could match that score." Sir Christopher said.

He concluded that BT had built solid foundations for a sustainable future and continues to be a market leader and an innovator with a powerful brand and significant opportunities for profitable growth.

"Above all, our results demonstrate that we are delivering what our customers want. And ultimately that is the strongest foundation for success.

Edgar Filing: BT GROUP PLC - Form 6-K

"BT today feels to me like a new company - and we share a new optimism about the future," he said.

BT KEEPS IT IN THE FAMILY WITH BT MOBILE HOME PLAN

Free calls home and family savings lead new mobile offer

BT today announced full details of BT Mobile Home Plan, its new mobile service. It has specifically designed the new package around meeting the needs of the modern family by offering free calls home and cheaper packages for families who sign up together.

With BT Mobile Home Plan customers won't have to pay for any calls to their home phone number which are under two minutes long. According to BT research, people phone home on average five times a week and most of those calls are for two minutes or less, making the new feature a real benefit.

Customers will also get savings by signing up more than one family member at a time. BT Mobile Home Plan costs GBP15 a month line rental for the first mobile handset and drops to GBP10 a month for up to five additional handsets for any more family members in the household who sign up.

Customers will be able to buy bundled, fixed price packages of call minutes which can be shared by the whole family. Fixed rate call prices mean customers know exactly how much they're paying for their service. Calls to local and national landlines will cost 10 pence a minute all day, every day. Calls to other BT Mobile Home Plan mobiles will cost exactly the same.

The bill-paying parents in the household can also keep an eye on how the minutes are being spent through a usage alert service that tells them how much is being spent and by whom. A single bill will cover all the family's mobile use and mean a lot less paper and hassle all round.

BT Mobile Home Plan will be available at more than 1,000 High Street branches of The Carphone Warehouse, The Link and Phones 4U by the end of October or soon after. BT has selected T-Mobile as its partner for the BT Mobile Home Plan venture. BT will act as a mobile service provider.

Pierre Danon, chief executive of BT Retail, said: "We believe BT is the first company to recognise that customers are not just individuals, but parts of families. Family members who are likely to already have an existing relationship with BT can now also get all their mobiles from us on the same contract, taking the hassle out of managing different call charges and line rentals. This is a perfect solution for any modern family.

"It gives parents the peace of mind which comes from knowing your son or daughter can phone home any time for free, almost regardless of how much they have used the phone that month.

"Our aim is to provide simple, complete and cost effective services for all our customers whether they are at home, in the office or on the move. With our new consumer mobile service we're doing just that."

Brian McBride, managing director of T-Mobile UK, said: "To achieve continued success in the UK mobile market, you have to create new ways to increase revenues and to acquire and keep the right customers.

"I believe our new relationship with BT represents the best opportunities to achieve in these areas, as we combine a strong network with an outstanding consumer brand. This is a win-win situation."

Looking to the future, BT is also beginning trials of a revolutionary new mobile solution. Trialists will be able to use their mobile normally when they are out and about, but when in a 'bluetooth' site, calls will be routed over the fixed network rather than the GSM mobile network. So it means customers can benefit from cheaper and clearer calls. BT has worked with Ericsson to implement an initial trial, for which Sony Ericsson will supply trial handsets.

BT's roadmap for the eventual product is that it should be a truly converged communications device allowing users take advantage of Wi-Fi technology to surf the web or download files on the move.
