Frequently Asked Questions

Managers/Supervisors of Domestic Employees

1. What am I allowed to tell my employees? At this point, you should not tell employees anything that has not already been put into writing in the Q&As, or in the press release. It will be extremely important to keep employees focused on their current job responsibilities.
2. Am I restricted to or from any types of communication mechanisms (i.e. email, word documents, verbal)? Please do not answer any questions related to this transaction in writing (email or other written/typed mechanism). Anything that is communicated in writing must be formally disclosed to the public, which is why we will be controlling written communication through a Web portal.
3. When will I know which employees will be on my staff once this merger is complete? Will I have any advanced notice? What will the process be for assigning employees to different work groups? As the completion of the merger gets closer, VPs will be providing information to their work groups to plan for a smooth transition. Human Resources will play an active role in this process, as well.
4. How will we determine what the right size of the organization will be and how will we determine who will be laid off, if layoffs are needed? Once the merger is complete, we will make an assessment of staffing needs associated with the new combined organization, and will determine at that time whether staffing adjustments will be made. If a layoff is necessary, a formal process will be put into place to determine who will be impacted.
5. Am I able to make any work process changes in anticipation of merger closure? No, unless they are a normal part of current business.
6. What can I do to prepare for the upcoming completion of the merger? Stay in close contact with your VP, and monitor the web portal.
7. Should I continue to have HR recruit for my existing open positions knowing that I may not have a need for those openings once the merger is final? This is really case by case. Your VP will be discussing this with you in the very near future to determine the most prudent action to take with regard to recruiting for your own area.
8. How can I settle my employees down and keep them focused on the tasks at hand during this time of uncertainty? First and foremost, acknowledge you understand there will be some unrest as we move closer to the merger being completed. Then, help employees focus on their current roles, responsibilities, and goals.
9. How do I best answer the questions: How will my job change, or Will I still have a job once the merger is complete? from my employees? Same as #4.
