Companhia Siderúrgica Nacional (CSN) (BOVESPA: CSNA3; NYSE: SID) hereby informs its shareholders and the public that:

On the present date, CSN entered into an agreement (“Agreement”) with Vale, for the purpose of terminating all pending law suits between the two companies, including those (i) related to alleged indemnification or compensation rights arising from the exclusion of the “preference rights” relative to the acquisition of surplus iron ore produced by the Casa de Pedra mine, as well as to the Casa de Pedra mine itself (“Indemnification Right”), (ii) arising from obligations envisaged in the agreements related to the elimination of crossed shareholdings between Vale and CSN, occurred in December, 2000 (“Elimination of Crossed Shareholdings Obligations”); and (iii) related to other pending matters in regard to these issues. In accordance with the provisions of the Agreement, CSN and Vale granted mutual, full and general release in respect to the matters provided for therein.

The Agreement envisages the revision of the terms and conditions included in certain commercial contracts entered into between Vale and CSN, such as the contract to supply Vale with iron ore from the Casa de Pedra mine, signed on March 21, 2005, granting Vale the option of suspending or definitely cancelling said contract by the end of 2009. The Agreement also envisages the signing of pellet and pellet feed supply contracts between Vale and CSN.

In accordance with the Agreement, Vale’s controlling shareholders (namely, Previ, Litel and Bradespar) and CSN agreed to grant mutual release in regard to the matters related to the Indemnification Right. The Agreement provides for a resolutive condition in case a release is not signed by CSN and said controlling shareholders (“Shareholders’ Ratification”), within thirty (30) consecutive days, with regard to the Elimination of Crossed Shareholdings Obligations.

Until the obtainment of the Shareholders’ Ratification, Vale and CSN agreed to suspend (i) the law suits mentioned in item 1 above; (ii) the obligations arising from the above-mentioned pre-existing commercial and contractual relations.

If the Shareholders’ Ratification is not formalized, CSN shall have the option of canceling the Agreement within thirty (30) days as of the deadline for the formalization of said Shareholders’ Ratification. In which case, the law suits and the commercial relations between the parties shall proceed as normal.
