July 2014 Orders Comments

Trailing three-month order trends improved consistent with previously communicated expectations, reflecting gradually recovering global business investment. Underlying orders grew 7 percent, excluding 1 percentage point from currency translation, with growth strongest in North America. All segments accelerated, led by robust growth in Process Management.

Process Management orders growth accelerated, led by favorable oil and gas market conditions in North America. Growth remained strong in Asia, as India and South Korea more than offset continued weakness in Australia, and demand improved in Europe, supported by strength in the North Sea region. Latin America was slow, as strong demand in Mexico contrasted with broad weakness elsewhere, and conditions remained unfavorable in Middle East/Africa. Currency translation added 3 percentage points.

Industrial Automation order trends reflected solid growth, as global demand for capital goods continued to recover slowly. Strength in power generating alternators, electrical distribution, and fluid automation offset slower market conditions for motors and drives, particularly in Europe. Currency translation added 1 percentage point.

Network Power orders grew moderately, reflecting robust demand in Asia and improvement in North America and Latin America. Strong growth continued in the telecommunications infrastructure business and data center markets improved broadly, except for Europe. Currency translation added 1 percentage point.

Climate Technologies orders growth reflected continued industry momentum, particularly in North America residential air conditioning markets that benefited from demand acceleration related to upcoming regulatory changes. Market conditions remained solid in Asia, with more modest growth in Europe. Growth moderated but continued in the refrigeration business, and sensors and controls demand remained soft.

Commercial & Residential Solutions orders grew moderately, reflecting solid momentum in North American markets. The improvement was led by strong demand in the professional tools and wet/dry vacuums businesses.
