Ford Raising $3 Billion, Paying Down Revolving Credit Line

By Keith Naughton

Nov. 2 (Bloomberg) Ford Motor Co., seeking to strengthen its balance sheet, said it is raising $3 billion, while paying down and pushing back the maturity of a $10.1 billion line of credit.

Ford said it is seeking to pay down 25 percent of the revolver and move back by two years, to 2013, the maturity of the remaining $8 billion liability. Ford also said it is offering $2 billion in senior notes that can be converted to common stock or cash in 2016. Ford also in December will offer as much as $1 billion in common shares through broker-dealers.

We expect the moves will enhance Ford's automotive liquidity and over time reduce the company's debt burden, providing an additional cushion given the still uncertain state of the economy, Ford Chief Executive Officer Alan Mulally said in a statement. Earlier in the day, it announced a surprise $997 million third-quarter profit.

Ford, the only major U.S. automaker to avoid bankruptcy, is seeking to reduce a debt load larger than General Motors Co. and Chrysler Group LLC, which shed liabilities in reorganization. GM's liabilities will be $22.3 billion in 2011, while Ford's will total $38.1 billion, Barclays Capital auto analyst Brian Johnson said in an Oct. 20 research note.

This will de-lever our balance sheet over time as we pay down 25 percent of our revolver, Neil Schloss, Ford's treasurer, said in a conference call with reporters. This is one step toward our goal to get to investment-grade credit rating.

Taking Advantage

Ford is taking advantage of shares that have more than tripled this year. Ford rose 58 cents, or 8.3 percent, to $7.58 at 4:15 p.m. in New York Stock Exchange composite trading.

Lenders representing $6 billion of Ford's revolving credit line have already agreed to reduce and extend the maturity from Dec. 15, 2011, to Nov. 30, 2013, Schloss said. In exchange, lenders will receive a reduction of as much as 25 percent in their revolving commitments, a 1 percentage point increase in interest rate margins and an increase in fees and payment of an up front fee. Revolving lenders have until Nov. 18 to submit their response.

The underwriters of the $2 billion in senior convertible notes have the option to purchase an additional $300 million in principal of senior convertible notes, Ford said.
